My story

I am a designer because I create. I create moments of engagement. I create ways to educate. I create to solve problems. I create because I love it.

I graduated with honors from art school where I learned to see things differently; however, it wasn't until years later that I figured out my formula for design. All great designs have one thing in common: contrast. It can be contrast of style, color, scale, shape, feeling or just about anything.

Making something feel different is how to get noticed, but the real secret to successful design is finding a way to be different with a purpose. "Contrast Creates Interest."
